REPORT OF THE CHAIR

Madam President,

Mr. Secretary General,

Distinguished Colleagues,

I am honoured to report on behalf of our Ad Hoc Committee on Countering Terrorism (CCT).

The Russian Federation waged war on Ukraine exactly one year ago. Although this unjustified attack has to be seen primarily from the lenses of a conventional inter-state conflict, it also bears implications in the field of counter-terrorism.

For instance, the engagement of non-state actors on the frontlines in Ukraine has made the ongoing crisis more complicated. Hybrid warfare dynamics, ever more frequent cyber attacks, and worrisome sabotage of critical infrastructures continue to impact the broader region.

Hybrid warfare itself is a rather complex and all-encompassing concept. As such, it does not help in drawing a clear line between acts of war and acts of terrorism, or between cyber-warfare and cyber-terrorism.

At a global level, terrorism and armed conflict are clearly interlinked, with 97 percent of all terrorist deaths recorded in conflict zones¹. Terrorist organisations exploit the instability caused by wars to seek shelter from international prosecution, recruit new adepts and finance their illegal activities.

The war in Ukraine is no exception. This conflict has destabilised the entire region, with enormous political, economic and humanitarian repercussions. Not to mention the growing lack of trust between our countries, which is negatively impacting international co-operation in counter-terrorism.

Terrorist groups are likely to use areas of tension and instability, such as Ukraine today, to inspire terrorist activism and finance their operations. This, together with the already dire socio-economic consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic, will further increase the susceptibility of our populations to radicalization, with vulnerable groups more prone to join radical groups.

Terrorists continue to spread propaganda, recruit, and radicalize via virtual platforms. Increased digital financial activity has also reduced the capabilities of financial institutions to detect anomalies, and given terrorist groups new opportunities to abuse funding platforms.

ISIS and affiliated groups remain active globally; however, attack modalities have shifted. In Europe, they are often self-funded, perpetrated by lone actors and carried out by light weaponry. Women, families and youth assumed more important and authoritative roles in terrorist groups linked to ISIS.

We have also been experiencing an increase in right-wing extremism and male supremacist attacks. These attacks are often associated with anti-government and anti-democratic ideologies. Disinformation campaigns fuel extremist ideologies, with many promoting civil war and domestic uprisings.

The situation in Afghanistan remains tense, with widespread economic insecurity, political exclusion, and violent crackdowns by Taliban government forces. In December 2022, we were shocked to learn that the Taliban government has prohibited primary school education for girls. Depriving Afghan women and girls of their fundamental rights and freedoms will serve the narrow-sighted interests of terrorist groups.

Globally, Africa - and in particular the Sahel - continues to be one of the most severely affected areas by terrorism and insurgents, with ISIL affiliates posing a direct threat to our neighbouring region.

Dear colleagues,

Against this complex backdrop, we shall continue to support global counter-terrorism efforts, including by monitoring new trends and placing human rights high on our agenda.

Just yesterday, we held the 14th Meeting of the CCT, where we discussed with OSCE experts how we could best contribute to countering the financing of terrorism. This is an important area of work where I believe we could do more in the future.

Working closely with other international Parliamentary Assemblies, thus extending the reach of our counter-terrorism efforts and positively influencing parliamentarians across the globe, has been a key priority since 2017.

On 30 January, I had the privilege to chair the Third Coordination Meeting of Parliamentary Assemblies in Doha, along with my fellow CCT colleagues. On this occasion, I emphasised that working hand-in-hand with parliamentarians from Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and the Arab world is both a privilege and a unique opportunity for the OSCE PA. These coordination efforts are critical to improve our global impact and promote human-rights compliant and gender-sensitive approaches.

In addition, we continue to expand our co-operation with the United Nations Office on Counter Terrorism through targeted joint initiatives, such as the Parliamentary Policy Dialogue organised on 31 January 2023.

The event focused on the topic of Border Security and Information Sharing, an area where our Assembly has worked hard in the past and conducted a globally appreciated oversight initiative to promote the implementation of key international obligations stemming from UNSC Resolution 2396.

I am proud to report that the key findings and recommendations of this innovative effort - through which we coordinated the oversight powers of national parliaments across our region - were successfully shared with 16 parliamentary assemblies! Moreover, the United Nations has taken our initiative as a model for future similar efforts.

I think this speaks strongly in favour of our pragmatic contribution in this context, which did not only help to fight terrorism and prevent violent extremism in our region, but is now inspiring similar efforts across all continents.

We plan to follow up on these two important events by organising the Fourth Meeting of the Coordination Mechanism and a new Parliamentary Policy Dialogue in Vienna sometime around summer 2023.

Finally, I am happy to announce that our committee will resume its field work by conducting an official visit to Switzerland on 22-23 March 2023.

During the visit, we hope to gain insight into Swiss counter-terrorism efforts and learn more about human rights work in counter-terrorism from Geneva-based organisations, such as the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. These visits are instrumental to better understand trends and concerns on the ground, thus better aligning our work to citizens' needs.

Dear colleagues, let me conclude by commending all our members for their dedication and our International Secretariat for its professional support.

Thank you.
