REPORT OF THE CCT CHAIR

Madam President,

Mr. Secretary General,

Distinguished Colleagues,

The challenges and threats that we face in countering terrorism and violent extremism are rapidly evolving.

One persistent trend is that conflict remains a primary driver of terrorism, aggravating both the frequency and lethality of terrorist attacks in regions affected by them, be it in Ukraine, the Sahel region or, as we witnessed more recently, the Middle East.

Our Committee was astounded by the appalling terrorist attacks launched by Hamas against Israel on October 7, killing and wounding thousands of civilians, and kidnapping hundreds of innocent persons, including many children. I join our President in expressing full solidarity and sympathy to the people of Israel. I vigorously condemn all violence against unarmed civilians, urge the immediate release of all hostages and stress the need to bring to justice all terrorists, in line with international and national law.

This is a watershed moment for our democracies: we need to be able to respond effectively to terrorism in all its forms and protect our citizens, institutions and values. And we should do so in compliance with the rule of law to demonstrate that we are totally different from them. And that we are right, while they are wrong!

Some might argue that this “battle” is unfair. After all, terrorists exploit the freedoms in our democracies to gain support, finance their activities and spread hate and disinformation, often attacking the most vulnerable ones. Hence, we need to be vigilant - which is the price to pay for liberty - and resolute in our determination to prevent and counter violent extremists through comprehensive responses, which are coherent with our core values.

Curbing the activities of terrorist groups and bringing perpetrators of terrorism to justice is critical also in the context of the Russian Federation's war of aggression against Ukraine, which remains high on our Committee's agenda.

In this context, I want to thank you again for your unequivocal support during the last Annual Session for our Resolution on the Wagner Group's Terroristic Nature and Actions. Inter alia, this important resolution expanded the conventional concept of a "terrorist group" in the post-9/11 era by incorporating "hybrid groups"¹ into this understanding.

I am pleased to report that several national parliaments followed up on our resolution by holding debates on this issue, often adopting similar declarations. My country, Austria, is one of them. This proves that when our Assembly is pragmatic, balanced and innovative, it can spearhead critical counter-terrorism efforts globally.

The increased use of new technologies and artificial intelligence by terrorist groups is another worrisome trend, especially the growing application of cost-effective, easily accessible drones. Terrorist groups use drones for reconnaissance, lethal attacks and targeted assassinations, often with devastating consequences for the civilian population.

Open-source algorithms and reduced technical knowledge requirements have lowered the barriers for the use of AI, drones and other new technologies for harmful purposes. Ultimately, new technologies grant many individuals the capability to inflict greater harm than at any point in human history.

¹ Groups which act both as terrorist organisations and belligerent entities within an armed conflict.

Against this fast-evolving backdrop, we continue to support global counter-terrorism efforts and hold human rights and fundamental freedoms central to all of our work.

In this regard, I am happy to report that during the 4th Counter-Terrorism Co-ordination Meeting of Parliamentary Assemblies in Vienna on 4 October, our PA was re-elected to chair this innovative Co-ordination Mechanism for one more year. On behalf of the OSCE PA, I am honoured to continue coordinating the counter-terrorism work of 16 assemblies around the world with the support of the United Nations Office of Counter-Terrorism. This provides us with the unique opportunity to shape global parliamentary efforts, promoting a more comprehensive and coherent counter-terrorism response.

It also opens our eyes towards crises that are adjacent to our own region, nonetheless impacting our security. Notably, the thematic focus of this past Fourth Coordination Meeting was on the situation in the Sahel, which is the most affected region by terrorism in the world, accounting for 43% of the global total deaths in 2022, compared to just 1% in 2007!²

This exchange was followed by a 2nd Policy Dialogue on the prevention of violent extremism and its impact on youth, with the active contribution of several members of our Network of Young Parliamentarians. Again, an excellent opportunity to share lessons learned with renowned experts and legislators from across the globe.

I would like to follow up on the critical role of youth in preventing terrorism also during our next coordination meetings, which are expected to take place in spring 2024.

Moreover, our Committee intends to explore the multidimensional relationship between AI, terrorism, and extremist activities on the margins of our Winter

Meeting in Vienna, in February 2024. This is one of the most pressing issues in our line of work, an area where the PA can promote the development of much needed policy guidance and regional cooperation, including with the support of technology companies.

Finally, our Committee is planning to organise another field event next year. It is through visits such as the one we held last March in Switzerland that we can exchange valuable insights gained in our respective countries.

In concluding, I would like to applaud the commitment of our committee members and commend the highly professional support provided by our International Secretariat.

Thank you.

Developed innovative policy guidance in topical areas of counter-terrorism:

- The Wagner Group's Terroristic Nature and Actions (2023 Vancouver Resolution)

- Addressing the Threats Stemming From the Return & Relocation of FTFs (2019 Luxembourg Resolution),
- Preventing and Countering Terrorism and Violent Extremism and Radicalization that Lead to Terrorism (2018 Berlin Resolution).

Promoted the implementation of relevant international obligations, such as on border security and information sharing stemming from UNSCR 2396 (2019), through parliamentary oversight initiatives and consistent public messaging.

Boosted international co-ordination through a network of partnerships, including with the OSCE, the United Nations and various interparliamentary assemblies. Since June 2022, the OSCE PA has been chairing the first Co-ordination Mechanism of Parliamentary Assemblies on Counter-Terrorism.
