OSCE PA prepares for second round of voting in Ukraine

The International Secretariat of the OSCE Parliamentary Assembly is busy finalizing preparations for the observation mission to the second round of the Ukraine election on 7 February.

The OSCE PA delegation and all OSCE short-term observers will continue to be led by Assembly President Joao Soares (Portugal), who was appointed by the OSCE Chairman-in-Office as Special Co-ordinator to deliver the post-election statement on behalf of the OSCE at a press conference scheduled to take place in Kyiv on 8 February.

As in the first round, the OSCE mission, comprising the PA and the Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (ODIHR), will co-operate with other parliamentary assemblies observing the second round. Sixty observers from the PA have registered for the second round and will be deployed in the six regions that were observed in the first round.

In the first round, over 800 short term observers were deployed as part of the International Election Observation Mission (IEOM). The observers represented 47 of the 56 OSCE participating States and reported overwhelmingly positively on the election.

“This was a good and competitive election and very promising for the future of Ukraine’s democracy,” said President Soares following the election.

Observers noted that candidates were able to campaign freely and that a pluralistic media offered voters a variety of information about the candidates.
