Ready for the 18th Annual Session in Vilnius

Meeting for the first time in a Baltic country, around 530 participants are getting ready for the 18th Annual Session of the OSCE Parliamentary Assembly from 29 June to 3 July, hosted by the Parliament of Lithuania. Open to the media, the Session will take place in the Seimas (Parliament) in Vilnius.

Under the main theme of "The OSCE: Addressing New Security Challenges," the OSCE parliamentarians will debate and vote on resolutions dealing with various aspects of security in the OSCE area. Those adopted will be incorporated into a final document, called the Vilnius Declaration, which will offer policy recommendations to OSCE participating States and will be distributed to all governments of the 56 OSCE countries.

Strengthening and reforming the OSCE, promoting human rights and civil liberties, energy and food security, climate change, freedom of expression, and arms control are some of the issues that will be considered by the parliamentarians from 50 OSCE countries. In addition, parliamentarians from Algeria, Jordan and Afghanistan are participating as observers.

The call for strengthening and reforming the OSCE is made in a resolution with OSCE PA President Joao Soares (Portugal) as principal sponsor. The resolution is one of 24 to be debated, pending approval from the Assembly's Standing Committee. Also, the Assembly's Second and Third General Committees will consider resolutions dealing with economic, environmental and social consequences of the global financial crisis, presented by Ivor Callely (Ireland) and Natalia Karpovich (Russian Federation), respectively. The First Committee will consider a resolution on food security, presented by Riccardo Migliori (Italy). OSCE Chairperson-in-Office Dora Bakoyannis will address a special plenary session on 30 June, and OSCE Secretary General Marc Perrin de Brichambaut will address the Standing Committee on 29 June.

A live video webcast of the Annual Session will be available on the OSCE PA website (www.oscepa.org) starting 29 June, courtesy of the Lithuanian Parliament.
