

High-level OSCE PA participation at Human Dimension Implementation Meeting in Warsaw

Addressing the opening of the OSCE Human Dimension Implementation Meeting in Warsaw on Monday, OSCE PA President George Tsereteli (Georgia) said that four decades after the Helsinki Final Act, the struggle to respect and promote human rights and human security remains a challenge in the OSCE area. Noting that the past decade has represented a downward trend, Tsereteli stressed that the human dimension requires increased dedication and focus by all.

“This forum,” he noted, “should be seen as an opportunity for discussion and self-reflection, rather than an arena for finger-pointing and self-justifications. But, of course, honest discussions and debates need a practical follow-up. We need political will to put all these ideas into practice.”

Also participating from the OSCE PA at the HDIM were the Assembly’s human rights committee Chair Kyriakos Hadjiyianni (Cyprus), OSCE PA Special Representative on Civil Society Engagement Pia Kauma (Finland), and OSCE PA Secretary General Roberto Montella. Several bilateral meetings have taken place on the margins of the HDIM. The Members took the opportunity of the HDIM to hold a range of individual meetings including with civil society groups active within the OSCE region.

In his opening remarks, President Tsereteli highlighted relevant recommendations from the PA’s recent Luxembourg

Declaration, adopted at the Annual Session in July. He also noted that in order to strengthen the OSCE PA’s engagement with civil society and promote anti-corruption efforts, he has recently appointed new Special Representatives to focus on these issues.

He highlighted the OSCE’s consensus rule as an embodiment of the inclusiveness of the Organization and one of its strengths, but stressed that it cannot be allowed to become its weakness.

The HDIM, organized by the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights, is taking place 16-27 September in the Polish capital. This year’s conference includes more than 1,500 participants from across the 57 countries of the OSCE.
