OSCE Parliamentary Assembly President Ranko Krivokapic was in Washington last week, where he met with members of the OSCE PA's U.S. delegation and senior staff of the German Marshall Fund (GMF).

In a meeting with Craig Kennedy,

The June seminar will gather many distinguished speakers with a background in international politics as well as members of the U.S. Congress and Senate. Reform of the OSCE has been one of the key debates in OSCE PA dialogue process and the aim of these seminars will be the transformation of all useful input into a concrete guideline on the future of the organization.

In Washington, Krivokapic also met with U.S. Congressmen Alcee Hastings, former OSCE PA President and current Special Representative on Mediterranean Affairs, and OSCE PA Vice-President Robert Aderholt. The main topics of discussion were the upcoming meetings of the Assembly in Vienna and Baku.

They also talked about possible OSCE PA election observation missions this year and the current political situation in Ukraine and Bosnia and Herzegovina. On this issue, Mr. Krivokapic reiterated his view that all acts of violence should be condemned and that the PA should advocate for peaceful negotiations and dialogue between all stakeholders.

PA participates in workshop on women's political participation in the OSCE area

On 6-7 February, the OSCE PA participated in a workshop on women's political participation, hosted by the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights in their Warsaw headquarters.

Moderating a session on women in parliaments, the OSCE PA's Deputy Director of Administration Marc Carillet from the Vienna Liaison Office noted the importance that the Assembly attaches to gender equality, highlighting the role of the PA's Special Representative on Gender Issues, Dr. Hedy Fry (Canada), who has been tasked with monitoring gender balance in the OSCE and promoting discussion on gender mainstreaming within the organization.

Participants welcomed the fact that with nine women out of 20, female representation in the PA's Bureau has now reached 45 per cent.

Marc Carillet will be supporting Special Representative Fry in her future activities. He will also act as the gender focal point in the International Secretariat. Dr. Fry will report to the joint session of the general committees of the Winter Meeting on Friday afternoon.
