OSCE PA parliamentarians to lead three election observation missions

OSCE PA President Joao Soares has appointed the leaders of the Parliamentary Assembly's three election observation missions in late March and early April to the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM), Montenegro, and Moldova.

Danish parliamentarian Pia Christmas-Moeller will head the mission to FYROM on 22 March, Slovenian parliamentarian Roberto Battelli will head the mission to Montenegro on 29 March, while Greek parliamentarian Petros Efthymiou has been appointed to head the mission to Moldova on 5 April. All three are experienced election observers with over 30 missions between them in the last few years.

The OSCE PA observation mission to the parliamentary elections in Moldova will be a full mission with a high number of members of parliament participating, while the missions to the presidential elections in FYROM and to the parliamentary elections in Montenegro will be limited missions, each consisting of a smaller number of parliamentarians.

"I appreciate the willingness of these three parliamentarians to continue the Parliamentary Assembly's vital work in election observation since 1993," said President Soares upon announcing the appointments. "These elections are important in the continued democratic development of all three countries and it is my hope that they will be both free and fair."

PA Vice-President Cardin outlines priorities as Chair of U.S. Helsinki Commission

In resolving conflicts and promoting security across the OSCE area, the OSCE Parliamentary Assembly is "an extremely valuable institution that brings parliamentarians together," said U.S. Helsinki Commission Chairman Benjamin Cardin in an interview for the OSCE PA's web site.

Parliamentarians "know how to resolve differences," he said, "and I do think we can help prevent conflicts and deal with the frozen conflicts."

The U.S. senator also outlined his priorities as Helsinki Commission Chairman and described the renewed support for the Helsinki process in the new administration of President Barack Obama.
