OSCE PA Vice-President Riccardo Migliori, in his capacity as Head of the OSCE PA Election Observation Mission for the 23 October elections to the Tunisian National Constituent Assembly, paid a second visit to the country from 28 September to 1 October.

Following a recommendation of the Tunisian electoral authorities, Migliori visited the southern part of the country to get a direct impression of the preparation for the elections and to assess the socio-political climate during the election campaign in rural areas of Tunisia.

He also underlined that the climate of the political debate at the beginning of the election campaign is constructive and encouraging.

Efthymiou addresses Barcelona conference

Addressing a conference of the Institute for Cultural Diplomacy in Barcelona on 23 September, OSCE PA President Petros Efthymiou spoke about the importance of enhancing the involvement of the OSCE and its Parliamentary Assembly in the Mediterranean region. The President noted the importance of Mediterranean dialogue in the OSCE, specifically mentioning that there is a need for the OSCE to enhance its role in the region by achieving closer co-operation with the Mediterranean partners.

"Both the OSCE participating States and Mediterranean Partners for Co-operation should aim at promoting security and co-operation in the region through a comprehensive process of enhanced political dialogue, economic co-operation and intercultural exchanges," Efthymiou said.

President Efthymiou stressed that the OSCE PA is strongly in favour of re-launching the Union for the Mediterranean and strengthening its role. It is time, he said, to develop and utilize the full potential of such a project, especially in sectors such as energy and the environment.

He stated that the PA would continue to promote the Mediterranean dimension of the OSCE, in particular through participation in annual OSCE Mediterranean Conferences, and by deploying an election observation mission to Tunisia. Efforts to re-establish stability in the Arab world will be addressed at the OSCE PA's annual Mediterranean Forum as well as upcoming side meetings, he said.
