Assembly adopts Vancouver Declaration, establishes Ukraine working group

The OSCE PA's 30th Annual Session, which opened with speeches on 30 June by OSCE PA President Margareta Cederfelt (Sweden), Speaker of the Canadian Senate Raymond Gagné, Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons Chris d'Entremont, and Head of the OSCE PA's Canadian Delegation Hedy Fry, culminated on 4 July with adoption of the Assembly's Vancouver Declaration. Containing recommendations on political and military affairs, economic and environmental concerns, and human rights, the Declaration will now be made available to parliaments and governments of OSCE participating States.

Focusing heavily on the Russian Federation's war against Ukraine, the Vancouver Declaration also addresses such diverse topics as plastic pollution, migration and nuclear weapons. It also deals extensively with institutional challenges facing the OSCE, expressing deep concern about "increased attempts to misuse the OSCE consensus rule to block" the organization's functioning.

Meeting on 30 June, the OSCE PA's Standing Committee unanimously approved a proposal to establish a new parliamentary working group devoted to addressing the Russian Federation's ongoing war in Ukraine. Then-President Margareta Cederfelt (Sweden) said that the objective of the ad hoc committee is to ensure that the war remains at the forefront of the PA's activities and that Ukraine's needs are well considered. The mandate and composition of the working group will be announced in due time.

On the sidelines of the Annual Session, the PA's Ad Hoc Committee on Migration met on Saturday to review implemented activities, including a visit the previous day, organized by committee member Hedy Fry, to the NGO S.U.C.C.E.S.S. in Vancouver's Chinatown. The Network of Young Parliamentarians, chaired by David Stögmüller (Austria), heard from Special Representative on Youth Engagement Farah Karimi (Netherlands) and Guido Almerigogna, Special Advisor of North Macedonia's OSCE Chairmanship, who shared examples of youth engagement in the OSCE. The meeting included a panel discussion with Senators Marilou McPhedran and Rosemary Moodie from Canada focusing on Youth, Peace and Security and Canada's experience in building youth engagement.

Also meeting on Saturday was the Silk Road Support Group, an informal network to support economic co-operation. OSCE PA Special Representative and Head of Canada's Delegation Hedy Fry welcomed participants to Sunday's Working Lunch on Gender Issues, which was held under the theme "Gender-related considerations in armed conflicts: A parliamentary perspective" and featured presentations by representatives of Canadian parliament, academia and civil society.

The OSCE PA's Ad Hoc Committee on Countering Terrorism met Monday. Chaired by Reinhold Lopatka (Austria), the meeting featured a presentation by Prof. Jason Blazakis. To counter this alarming trend, he urged increased monitoring by international and national bodies. The CCT meeting also included a review of implemented and upcoming activities.

Other side meetings during the Annual Session focused on nuclear threats, antisemitism, and war crimes in Ukraine.
