

Parliamentarians discuss OSCE's future at Call for Action – Helsinki +50 Meeting

On the eve of the OSCE PA's 22nd Winter Meeting in Vienna, OSCE PA High-Level Expert Lamberto Zannier moderated a discussion in the framework of the Call for Action - Helsinki +50 Initiative, addressing a number of fundamental issues that the OSCE is facing amid the ongoing war in Ukraine and ahead of the 50th Anniversary of the OSCE's founding document, the Helsinki Final Act. The event engaged OSCE parliamentarians, signatories of the Call for Action, and representatives of the OSCE governmental side.

Following opening remarks by OSCE PA President Margareta Cederfelt (Sweden) and Secretary Roberto Montella who emphasized the crucial role of legislators in preserving and revitalizing the OSCE, three panelists addressed the meeting in hybrid format. Keynote speakers included Katarzyna Gardapkhadze, CEO of Responsible Leadership Academy; Walter Kemp, Global Initiative Against Transnational Organized Crime; and Cornelius Friesendorf, Institute for Peace Research and Security Policy at the University of Hamburg. The panelists set the scene by providing the scenarios for OSCE survival, caveats, and modus operandi under current circumstances compounded by lack of consensus and constructive dialogue among participating States, funding issues, absence of suspension mechanisms for members violating the rules and lack of sufficient political attention.

Discussion focused on questions of whether the Helsinki principles are still valid today or require adaptation, as well as whether to give the OSCE more "teeth" to ensure or even enforce implementation of commitments by its participating States or introduce penalties or "quarantine measure" for cases of blatant non-compliance with agreed rules. In the discussion, participants underlined the enduring relevance of the Helsinki Decalogue, which has served for nearly five decades as the basis of successful security co-operation in Europe. The question should primarily be whether, participants said, additions are required to ensure that all actors feel that the platform of principles reflects their security perceptions and needs.

To keep the OSCE afloat and most relevant amid current crises, in her closing remarks President Cederfelt encouraged legislators to discuss the challenges the OSCE is going through in their parliaments, while Secretary General Montella underlined the need to mainstream the achievements of the OSCE and make better use for the benefit of its people. Participants put forward a number of suggestions for possible action by parliamentarians to ensure better visibility, sustainability and effectiveness of the OSCE in the current challenging environment.
